"Oily-fusel and crushed stone notes on the nose are faintly Chablis-like, especially the intimations of sweet-saline raw scallop that go on to lend mouthwatering appeal on the silken palate. Hints of sage and sweet corn on the nose as well as inner-mouth take one closer to the typical character of Deidesheim Riesling. This finishes with fine persistence, albeit not quite the saliva-inducement or energy exhibited by a number of its "premier cru"-level stablemates. I was amazed to find this labeled as 13.5% alcohol, as I would never have guessed that much."
